The Geography of Grief: Mourning the Places that Shape Us

Place, memory, belonging, and identity: a conversation about the landscapes that shape our lives and what happens when they are lost

with

ALLISON DURANT

of the New Orleans Grief Center

Places hold our memories, shape our identity, and become part of the story we tell about ourselves. Allison Durant explores what happens when a beloved place changes, disappears, or is left behind — and how we carry those places forward as part of our ongoing story.
